

PREVIEW_ Stacey Reason - Interview (FL FEB 2017) 1

Dr. Stacey Reason: They feel as though they can participate, they feel as though they're not worried or concerned about their day-to-day activities, they don't fear injuring themselves and having repeated episodes of rhabdomyolysis and subsequent hospitalizations, a lot of them because they're able to be more active and by the very nature becoming fat-adapted are experiencing weight loss and improved... I don't even want to say necessarily exercise tolerance, but activity tolerance, they're able to participate in their lives in a way that they've never been able to before.

And from a psychological standpoint when you are a five-year-old child and you can't keep up with your friends, but you don't know why, over years that leaves a stigma. And so they're able to sort of share that and participate and feel good about themselves all the while improving their overall health.
